

— LOOK HONESTLY —

The Mirror.

A reflection workbook for agency owners. Five pillars.
Thirty-two subcategories. One honest score.

— WHAT TO EXPECT —

How to use this workbook.

This isn't a quiz. It's a mirror. Score yourself honestly across all five pillars — you'll get a number out of 160. The number isn't the prize. The conversation it forces with yourself is.

01 Read the snapshot prompts first.

Every pillar opens with three prompts: where you are today, what you're tolerating, and your 12-month vision. Write the honest version. Use names. Use numbers. Don't skip these — they set the lens for everything that follows.

02 Score each subcategory 1 to 5.

Each subcategory has a 5-star rating bar. Fill in the squares — 1 means "we don't have this," 5 means "dialed in, measured, and improving." Don't grade on a curve. Don't grade on potential. Grade on what's true today.

03 Write through every reflection question.

Three questions per subcategory. Lined writing space underneath. The point isn't to fill the lines — it's to surface what you've been avoiding. If a question makes you uncomfortable, that's where the work is.

04 End each pillar with the first-move prompt.

Every pillar closes with a single page asking what you're going to do first. Pick one thing. Write it down. That's the move you make Monday.

05 Tally your total at the end.

When all five workbooks are scored, add the numbers. The total tier on the back of Pillar 5 tells you where you stand — Foundation, Developing, Established, Advanced, or Elite. That's your starting line.

— THE ONE RULE —

If you're tempted to give yourself a 4 because you're "almost there" — it's a 3. The point of this workbook isn't to feel good. It's to see clearly. Score the agency you have, not the agency you're building toward.
